- 2 This is not a picture dealing with man hunters, as the title might suggest but ----
- 3 A picture dealing with the hunters and the hunted of the primeval forests.
- 4 And the one great enemy that so readily destroys these forests and the inhabitants thereof.
- 5 Each spring most men hear the call from the northern woods, irresistible to most of us.
- 6 And soon we seek the one safe cure.
- 7 Back in Paradise.
- 8 New Brunswick's rivers abound in trout and salmon.
- 9 Caught.
- 10 Game to the end.
- 11 But the forest also offers good sport.
- 12 And suddenly----
- 13 Taking a cub bear alive is more exciting than shooting it as you'll see.
- 14 There's many a slip 'twixt the bear and the bit.
- 15 Bears are taught to dance but catching them beforehand is a harder job.
- 16 Caught
- 17 "Seeing double?"
- 18 The fellow who wrote the proverb "Catch the Bear Before You Sell His Skin," gave a big order.
- 19 The bears' home is one of the great natural resources of the United States and Canada. Fortunes are spent each year to protect these forests.
- 20 Bear lives in amity with bear, particularly when bread and molasses is to be had.
- 21 Canada takes precautions to prevent fires, posting warnings.
- 22 In spite of these warnings this often happens.

- 23 And in a few hours great stretches of forest can be reduced to this.
24 There is the careless motorist.
25 Starting something.
26 And unconscious of it.
27 At the top of the world watches the forest ranger.
28 "What's that?"
29 The fire is located by instrument.
30 Alarm sounded.
31 The answer.
32 Raging in majestic fury, threatening all the forest side.
33 From little sparks burst mighty flames.
34 Portable gasoline pump is a great invention.
35 The battle begins.
36 Calling for help over the portable telephone.
37 Caught just in time.
38 It was Shakespeare who wrote: "A little ^{is} fire quickly trodden out;
Which, being suffer'd rivers cannot quench."
